

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A package of a flexible material which has been formed into an envelope, which package has an access opening, which is closed by a seal which has been formed by bonding together two or more contacting layers of the material in a particular area. The package can be opened by pulling apart two bonded-together layers of material in the area. To that end the flexible material is provided with an engagement portion and the portion of the seal area that is positioned closest to said engagement portion has a convex edge.